

Inter-University Sustainable Development Research Programme (IUSDRP)

IUSDRP is a research infrastructure through which member universities can undertake more research on matters related to sustainable development. It is coordinated by the Research and Transfer Centre “Sustainable Development and Climate Change Management” at the Hamburg University of Applied Sciences (HAW Hamburg). The Head of the IUSDRP is Prof. Dr. (mult.) Walter Leal.

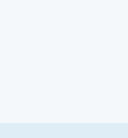

AIMS

- Assemble interdisciplinary, cross-faculty teams among its member universities that focus on sustainable development, with a keen interest in bidding for national and international sustainability research projects.
- Set-up and maintain a working environment that encourages international cooperation, supports institutional and inter-institutional project development, and hence increases the chances of success in project bidding and acquisition.
- Link and engage with the sustainability research community at member universities in the joint training of PhD students and the organisation of specific, strategic events.
- Catalyse and facilitate the production of high-quality joint publications in indexed journals, as well as in ground-breaking books and book chapters, in cooperation with well-established publishers.
